

This building is taller and bigger than the others and is often in the middle of the castle.

These walls have parts cut out of them to allow archers to fire arrows.

People fired arrows out of these small windows at the enemy.

The strong gate can be closed to keep out the enemy.

These towers are places around the castle so any danger can be seen.

Some castles are defended by an area of water surrounding it.

This can be put up or down to let people cross the moat.
