

Writing your own counting poem

Write your own poem

Using what you have learnt from your isolation lessons, write your own counting poem.

Remember you can go back to the previous lessons if you can't remember what a counting poem looks like.

Base your poem on the Artic to link to your learning journey.

If you are struggling, look at the two options below to help you:

Option 1 - Similar to Five speckled frogs

Answer these questions to help you plan your poem

- What will your poem be called?

(You could choose an animal from the artic and describe it using an adjective.)

Five _____

- What will they be doing?

(Remember: the frogs were eating delicious bugs!)

- What will they do?

(Remember: the frogs jumped into the pool.)

Option 2 - Similar to Jenny and Spot

Use this starter to get you going on your poem. You can start with 'five' rather than 'seven'.

Jenny and her friend were exploring the artic. Whilst exploring they found some interesting things.

They found...

You are just writing your poem in draft today - you will have time to publish it tomorrow. Email in your draft to Miss Nicholls or send her a video if you'd rather perform it!
